

Molly Claxton Johnson

She is the true definition of a matriarch—a woman of unwavering faith, enduring strength, and extraordinary legacy. As the proud mother of four children, grandmother of sixteen, great-grandmother of fourteen, and great-great-grandmother of three, her life is a living testament to God's faithfulness across multiple generations.

Committed to growing in both knowledge and spiritual maturity, she devoted six years to collegiate study in preparation for a life of ministry and service. Her educational journey reflects her steadfast commitment to answering God's call and equipping herself to serve Him and His people faithfully. She believes that ministry begins with a surrendered heart and is sustained through continual learning, prayer, and obedience to God's Word.

Throughout the years, she has faithfully served with a servant's heart in numerous areas of ministry. She has been a dedicated Adult Sunday School teacher, faithfully teaching and encouraging others through the study of Scripture while helping believers grow in their relationship with Christ. Her passion for sharing God's Word has made a lasting impact on those entrusted to her care.

Her ministry also includes serving as Chaplain of the Norman Rachel Bradley Missionary Board, where she has provided spiritual encouragement, prayer, biblical counsel, and compassionate support to fellow missionaries and members. Her heart for missions reflects her desire to see the love of Christ extended beyond the walls of the church and into communities near and far.

In addition, she has faithfully served as a member of the Mount Hermon Baptist Church Choir, using her voice as an instrument of worship to glorify God and inspire others through praise. Whether teaching, praying, singing, or simply offering a word of encouragement, she exemplifies a life devoted to serving wherever God has called her.
